Work experience: Easter hols guide

With Easter hopping into view, it's time to plan how you're going to balance hours binge-watching Netflix and stuffing chocolate with some career planning. No need to go hunting – we've already found the most egg-cellent work experience, workshops and culture trips to keep you busy over the two-week break.

Your opinions matter

If you've got twenty minutes to spare, fire up your laptop and take the Youth Voice Census 2024. The online survey is completely anonymous and will help experts on employment understand the barriers faced by young people to help create change. Boom!

SEND: The latest resources

Studies show that diverse organisations tend to be more innovative and profitable, yet the employment rate of people with special educational needs and disabilities is lower than the rest of the population. To help balance the scale, we've rounded up three brilliant opportunities for those facing barriers to entering the workforce.

Have you heard?
Our Government recently announced it's going to invest a further £60m in SME apprenticeships.

Apprenticeships: Debunking accountancy myths

Accountancy is one of the most influential departments in any organisation and yet, it's also one of the most mysterious. According to Grant Thornton, common myths like, "you need to go to university to become an accountant" (you don't!) are preventing many young people from seeing it as an attainable career path. Let's fix that.

Confident Futures

We'll be heading back to Stoke Mandeville Stadium on Tuesday 11th June with a fresh crop of inclusive employers and next steps organisations to help SEND students overcome barriers to employment. Check out 2023's event highlights and then bag your free tickets.
